The Lower Pond. Burnham Beeches is a broad expanse of wooded land in Buckinghamshire covering an extent of about 400 acres which was purchased by the Corporation of London and opened to the public in 1883. The wood contains some magnificent specimens of beech trees, some of them hundreds of years old. The principal drive intersecting the wood is the Lord Mayor's Drive, on the southern side of which are two ponds connected by a stream which also runs down to Burnham Common.

Gilie,

I am using my most beautiful pictures to show you that my thoughts of you are all beautiful thoughts. So when you have so little time for letter writing you can know that we at the north end of the Line are well and happy. The Blodgette boys have come & all [illegible] Mrs. B.'s brother-in-law. They all seem very [illegible] coming weather. We [illegible]
